

2 Strengths (What works well?)

1.Strength 1: I really liked how you used two different types of sources (a library book and a documentary video).

Why it helps: This makes the plan strong because watching a video and reading a book gives you balanced information, so you aren't relying on just one website.

2.Strength 2: Another great part of your plan is that you set specific deadlines for every step.

Why it helps: This will help you because you won't leave all your work until the night before the project is due.2 Limitations (What might cause a problem?)

1. Limitation : One tricky part might be Step 3, where you plan to interview Wangari Maathai.

Why it could be a problem: This will cause trouble because Wangari Maathai passed away in 2011, so a live interview is impossible.

2.Limitation : You might run into an issue with Step 1 because reading an entire adult autobiography (Unbowed) in a few days is very long.

Why it could be a problem: This could be hard because you might run out of time or get overwhelmed by difficult vocabulary.

1 Big Improvement (How to make it awesome!)

To make this plan even better, you should replace the live interview with an email or survey sent to a local environmental organization that follows her work, such as the Green Belt Movement website or a local tree-planting NGO.

This will fix the problem of trying to interview someone who is no longer living, while still giving you a primary source perspective for your MYP inquiry.
